Safety Tip ..... Distracted driving is dangerous .....Safety Tip

Most of us multi task while driving, and it is happening more often. If you're driving your vehicle, you are already multitasking. At a minimum you are: operating a piece of heavy machinery at high speed; navigating across changing terrain; calculating speeds and distances; and responding to all the other drivers and obstacles around you. Putting one more activity in the mix --even talking to your passengers or changing a radio station—can be enough to make you lose control of your vehicle or fail to respond in an emergency. Driver inattention is a factor in more than 1 million crashes in North America annually, resulting in serious injuries, deaths, and an economic impact that some experts say reaches nearly $40 billion per year. Visual distractions cause you to take your eyes off the road. When traveling at 65 mph, if you look at your GPS for two seconds to check where you are on the map, you'll have driven two-thirds the length of a football field before you see the road again. That gives you plenty of time and distance to get in a serious crash. Courtesy of the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety
